The department has been painted, new flooring installed and several improvements in anticipation of a full year's program or study and work by the young people enrolled in the twin-programs.

New Look & New Instructor

Tom O. Elder, 1970 VPI graduate of Madisonville, is the newly appointed director on the Distributive Education and Industrial Cooperative Program at Appomattox High School.

His predecessor is John McLean who will be assistant principal at the high school in the fall.

A busy program of renovation has been taking place in the 'old dormitory' building as Mr. Elder prepares for new duties with the two dozen and more young people involved in a study and work - training program which reaches into almost every major business establishment in Appomattox county and surrounding area.

Mr. Elder, who worked his way through college in a number of different jobs, says that his experiences will serve him well as he aids young people in landing and holding positions in the community.

He grew up on a dairy farm and was active in 4-H projects from the 5th through 12th grades. He attended Short Course at VPI for two years as a part of a dairy judging team. While at VPI he drove a school bus for Montgomery county and worked in a Leggett's Dept. store "at almost every job they had," he said.

He is married to the former Sandra Harvey, daughter of Mrs. T. C. Harvey, Jr. of Appomattox and the late Mr. Harvey.

Outside interests include golfing, creative writing, judo (He was a member of the Judo Club at VPI), and come fall, bird hunting.

Although his degree is in distributive education, Mr. Elder says he looks forward to dealing with both DE & ICT programs at the school. "I believe in getting out there and working with these young people," he says. His memberships is more than five state and national organizations dealing with his special field attest to his interest in 'getting the job done.' He belongs to DECA, AVA, National Association of Distributive Education Teachers, Virginia Association of Distributive Education Teachers, National Education Association and many others.

Businessmen have already been meeting the new instructor and in just a few weeks high school students will also be meeting and working with a very personable director of one of the business departments in the high school.

To Be I Must Be Content

by Mrs. Annie Fore

For sinners like me, My own life He gave.

The widows and fatherless, we must not fret
Remember those in prisons, and the hungry feed
A cup of cold water is remembered given to one in need
I must be content with raiment and my daily bread
If I would by Jesus be daily, constantly led
I must be content if I cannot be a princess, or a queen,
Just to know my Saviour, and on His strong arm lean
It means more to me, than riches silver and gold
Just to listen to the sweetest story that was ever told
How the Saviour came from heaven to ransom me
How He left His home in glory to set me free
When I see His dear face, I shall be satisfied
To know it was for a sinner like me, He died,
How can I ever pay the priceless debt I owe?
Think of all His suffering – because He loved me so.
I must be content and make this humble plea
Lord save my soul, and keep me throughout eternity.
